As far as I can remember, the collapse of Island happened shortly before the album was due to be released. She toured to promote it and cassette promo copies were mailed to radio stations, which is where this copy came from.

I had one of the copies of this that had been floating around for years, but finally got my hands on one of the original promo cassettes, which appeared to have never been played. I managed to get a great rip of it and, after a little bit of cleanup, it sounds amazing. I've downloaded a few different versions of this over the years and this is by far the best that I've heard. Even if you've downloaded this album before, you should definitely give it another listen.
