

Thanks to original uploader agovigli for all the efforts; and to ademotte for keeping the show alive at Dime.

Your enjoyment of this [show] will vary directly based on your opinion of Neil's "Greendale" album. The live performance of this one bordered on performance art, where there were actors onstage with Crazy Horse playing out the storyline while Neil sang. I have to admit that when I saw this tour in Chicago the concept was lost on me, but it could have been because of my nosebleed seats where I was so far removed that I couldn't tell what the heck was going on. In any case, the encore is the prototypical raw, hardcore Crazy Horse playing a few of their most well-known songs. Even if Greendale doesn't work for you, you will like the last 45 minutes or so if you're a Neil fan.

Sound quality is stunning. If you enjoyed the Greendale tour and don't have this one, it's well worth the downloading - the best-sounding recording that I've heard from the tour, anyway.

I recieved three years ago in a trade a pro-shot video of the Neil Young 2003 Camden show. The first thing noted was the nice audio, but sometime in the right channel some dropouts happened. At the end of the ripped audio, the quality sound at my ears similar at a soundboard, too much closed. So I decided to check a way to improvement the quality sound of the show in a similar way that the Bruce Springsteen's fans made with some of their best recordings.

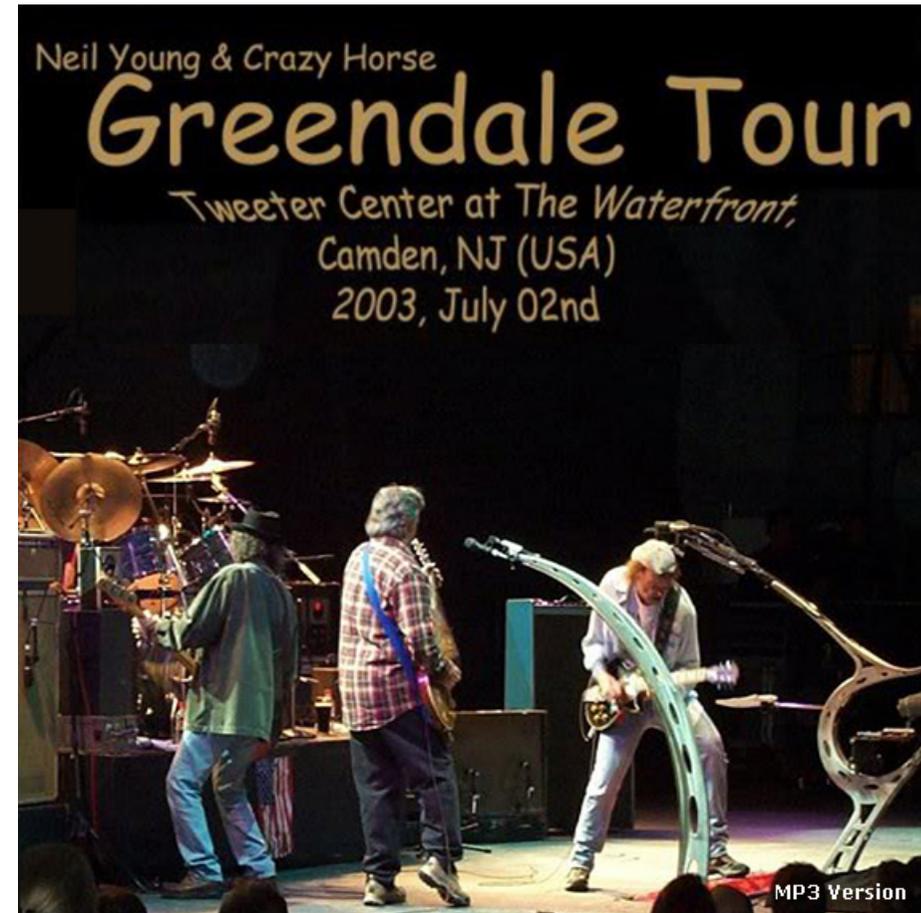

After adjusting the dropouts of the right channel I mixed the soundtrack video with an audience of the same show taken from a DAT, to open the closed sound. A really hard work for the synchronizations... finally the end: All the frequency was covered and the result paid all the work made.
