

Thanks to eckythump who recorded and shared the show at Dime.

eckythump noted:

Hamer Hall is a magnificent venue, one of the best in Melbourne with superb acoustics, though two people who bought tickets to the row in front of me might disagree - their seats they had purchased had been removed, literally! You could see the marks on the floor where their seats had been, but for some unexplained reason they had been removed. This led to much head scratching by the staff, with all this happening about 10 minutes before showtime. They were eventually led somewhere else, where I'm not sure as it was sold out, but I hope they get a refund!

It had been nine years since Patti Smith last toured Australia, and it's been widely publicised this will be her last tour here, and the pumped up crowd was ready to explode by the time her and the band walked out on stage at around 8:40 pm. The show was incredible, Patti's voice is better than ever and her band is magnificent. The crowd sat for the first two songs, then during Birdland one enterprising young lady decided to make her way up to the front, which then led to a free for all abandoning of seats and everyone else rushing to the front and everyone in the stalls standing for the rest of the show.

Unfortunately for one woman behind me this upset her, and you can hear her complaints about her bad back after Kimberly, and it got a bit tense between her and the people who had rushed the front and were standing behind me, which is what all the talking you can hear at this point was about...

It was a terrific show, and I'm very glad I got to witness one of the legendary artists perform her amazing Horses album in full! Hamer Hall has excellent acoustics, and the sound was mixed faultlessly, which in turn resulted in an excellent sounding recording. You will really enjoy listening to this one, I think the sound quality is excellent. Enjoy!
